58	19	The Answer should read "One of them was -- we called it erosion control. And when a crop is first germinating, it is susceptible to damage from windblown sand particles. Wetting the soil by short-duration irrigations reduces the potential for this type of crop damage. Also, when a crop is first germinating, there's a tendency for some soils to crust over, which impedes the crop from cracking up through the crust. (Continued next Page) And so you wet it to make that -- to facilitate the crop growth. So that would be one thing. We call that erosion control."	Corrected to provide a more complete answer
65	12	Change humidity to design	Misspoke
66	2	Change irrigation efficiencies to distribution uniformities	Misspoke
68	12	Change pool to Poole	Typo
87	15	The question was acre-feet per year, not acre-feet per yield.

Subject to the above changes, I certify that the transcript is true and correct.
